How to use these record sheets

These record sheets are designed to collect your thoughts, your research results and your ideas for the future of your business. They are designed to be easy to use and straightforward.

Your completed record sheets will build into a professional-looking plan that will not only help you run your business well, but will also make you proud of it from the start.

You will also find extra copies of all these record sheets on our website at www.essential-business.co.uk/step-by-step.

There you will find two types of record sheet:

- PDFs – you can download the pdfs and print them as many times as you want (you will need Adobe Acrobat Reader to be able to open them). You can type directly on to some of the pdf sheets.
- Spreadsheets – some of the record sheets, such as the cash flow forecast, are available as interactive spreadsheets, with automatic calculations built into them. If you own, or have access to, Microsoft Excel, you may find it easier to use these sheets, instead of having to do all the calculations again each time you change the numbers.

You are welcome to download all the sheets for printing, and you may use any of them as frequently as you wish. This gives you the chance to be creative whilst using your record sheets and gives you the opportunity to make alterations if you change any parts of your plan as you go along. It doesn't matter if the record sheets end up looking a bit messy, packed with your ideas and thoughts – you can always rewrite or type them once you are clear about your ideas at the end.

Remember: don't try to complete all the record sheets at once. It may take you some time to give them the thought they need and find the information you need. Also, feel free to skip any that do not apply to you. You can revisit them later, as your business grows.

Be creative! Get thinking and writing...

Your initial business idea

This is your starting point, how you think your product or service will be created and delivered to your customers. After this, you will use research to find out whether your initial idea works, or whether you need to change any aspects of your initial business idea before you start.

What do you think your product or service should be?

.....
.....
.....
.....
.....
.....
.....

What will your total 'package' include (product or service, plus level of customer service, quality, credit terms, any other 'extras')?

.....
.....
.....
.....
.....
.....
.....

How will you make it (your product) or create it (your service) and deliver it (your product or your service)?

.....
.....
.....
.....
.....

What makes you think there is a need for what you plan to offer?

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

What types of people do you expect to buy your product or service?

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

What evidence do you have that they will buy your product or service?

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

How you will tell those people about your product or service?

Key marketing research questions

Write down the key questions that could make the difference between success and failure for your business:

For example: 'What types of people will buy what I want to sell?'
'How many people fitting this description live within 20 miles of here?'

Secondary research results

Include detailed references to where you found the information – publications, websites, and so on – so you can find them again.

For example: Leek, Staffordshire has five convenience stores but no delicatessen.

Source: www.britinfo.net

Around 49% of the population of Leek is aged between 25 and 59, with over 15% being between 50 and 59 years of age.

Source: www.upmystreet.com (based on 2001 census data)
